Churchyard Biodiversity Project – Friday 15th March

A group of (fool)hardy folks wrestled with various machines last Friday to cultivate an area for sowing with bee-friendly pollinator plants. We managed to create an area of about 70 square metres which we hope will result in a colourful display over the summer. Seeds and signs have been ordered for delivery later this week. We will probably need to do a bit of weeding and tidying up before sowing but should aim to get the seed down in the ground by Easter.

Thanks to Mike, Julia, Roger, Nigel, Christina for battling with the machines and the mud.
